

Laboratory Specialist

Are you that rare combination of technical wizardry AND fantastic interpersonal skills? Are you a medical lab expert with an aptitude for customer service or sales? Then we are looking for you!

Backed by over 100 years in the health care industry, our client is one of the largest medical device and diagnostic companies in the world. Since 1985, they have been ranked number one for superior service and customer support and have transformed the way that clinical laboratories perform diagnostic testing today.

Due to positive growth in the BC market, this organization is looking for a Laboratory Specialist to develop and maintain relationships with customers at all levels of the laboratory. You will be performing System Verification studies for installations, and providing troubleshooting support and training for new and current customers. You will be an integral part of the sales process providing technical product demonstrations, workflow studies, and should have the ability to consult on laboratory processes and software issues with the equipment.

Ideally, you will have an Accredited Medical Laboratory certification and have worked within the hospital or clinical lab environment for 5+ years. Of course, experience working directly in a similar role would be great...but not necessary.

A very competitive salary and benefits package is offered, along with the opportunity to come on board with a Tier I organization in the diagnostics industry. If you are looking for a change or that chance to expand your laboratory skills and experience within the diagnostic space, then we should talk. Send your resume today to bdodge@locksearchgroup.com!
